Tests, Uncertainty, and CoExisting Conditions

Across

1. Involuntary shaking that may change

5. Doctor, nurse or other health professional who looks after your care

7. What a supporter can take during an appointment to help remember the answers (pen recommended)

9. Picture-taking test that can check for signs of a stroke

11. Kind of look at your diagnosis you can always ask for

12. What you have noticed and when it started, told by the world's leading expert: you

14. Neurological condition that can have its own treatment plan alongside FND (lights dimmed, please)

15. Helping someone ask questions and understand answers without taking over (sidekick, not superhero)

16. Writing down one question for your next appointment is a small one

20. Symptoms happen without choosing them

21. Your story in clinic-speak, and no exam on dates required

23. What you can always do with your clinician, no appointment script required

24. A sign supporting an FND diagnosis

25. What every condition deserves, even when you have several (no favourites allowed)

26. What clinicians look for across tasks

Down

2. What your symptoms are, whatever a test shows

3. What positive signs help your clinician build

4. Something you're welcome to take between questions (snack optional)

6. FND and another diagnosis can ___ be correct at the same time

8. The people working together on your care (matching jerseys not required)

9. Positive ones show FND, and you won't find them by the roadside

10. Symptoms change when attention shifts

11. What choosing just one or two questions helps you keep during a short appointment (camera optional)

13. Short, cheerful answer to "Can I have FND and another medical condition?"

17. Kind of signs that show FND

18. Chosen to check one particular thing (happily, no studying required)

19. What a test result can be without proving FND (or making your symptoms imaginary)

22. "What happens next?" summed up in one word