Making Sense of your symptoms

Across

1. Sometimes
the hardest things to find during a doctor's appointment.

5. A small
guide to your health, rather than a hunt for buried treasure.

7. Something that follows an episode, possibly including exhaustion.

10. Your thinking headquarters, occasionally a little forgetful.

12. Talking
ability that may change around a functional episode.

14. A clinical evaluation to investigate or understand a symptom.

16. A possible spark that increases the chance of symptoms.

17. A few
written words that save your memory some work.

19. Body
part that may experience functional weakness, below the hip.

20. What a new, serious health problem may need promptly.

Down

2. The
identification of a medical condition following clinical assessment.

3. What gets muddled when two weeks ago feels like four months ago.

4. Medical
term for a condition occurring alongside another condition.

6. The bigger picture that includes FND and other conditions.

8. A difference from your usual symptoms that may be worth mentioning.

9. A
written account that helps when details escape you.

11. An increased chance of something happening, rather than a certainty.

13. Healthcare
professional who assesses symptoms and may make diagnoses.

15. A period
when symptoms occur, rather than remaining continuously present.

18. A poor
night of this might come before a difficult day.
