Choosing Practice That Fits Your Life

Across

2. A possible sequel to an exhausting appointment.

7. Rehab's useful companion, not a lifetime contract.

8. Professional help that may need to be individualized.

11. Mental effort that can make an appointment exhausting.

13. Describing effects involving sound, light or touch.

14. Repeated effort that may help a skill grow familiar.

15. Being able to manage more without another person's help.

16. Rehabilitation care directed at movement and physical function.

20. One of these can be a mighty milestone.

22. Give your shoes an actual destination.

23. Regaining abilities, sometimes only in part.

Down

1. Where a clinic improvement meets everyday life.

3. Words aloud can improve gradually, not all at once.

4. Sticky notes serving as memory's tiny assistants.

5. A twelfth of a year; progress may take several.

6. A little improvement that still deserves notice.

9. What slow rehabilitation may reveal in the rearview mirror.

10. A hand's unwanted rhythm that can sometimes settle.

11. When a clinic win packs a bag and comes home.

12. The waiting room's least welcome soundtrack.

17. Wishes for recovery, without any guarantees.

18. Guided care, not a guaranteed magic wand.

19. Worth revisiting when treatment stops helping.

21. A therapist's aid isn't always a hammer.
